

THE DAILY BULLETIN.
SATURDAY EVE., APRIL 12, 1884.

The Republicans of Georgia have declared for Arthur.

A TEST vote on the Morrison bill is to be had next Tuesday.

A BILL to establish a postal telegraph system has been favorably reported to the Senate.

JOHN J. KNOX has signified his intention to resign his position as controller of the currency.

It is said at Lexington that Colonel Swope's resignation is conditional and that he can withdraw it if he wishes to do so.

On the seventy-five or eighty colonels in Kentucky at the beginning of the late war only about three thousand five hundred remain.

BLAINE gets a royalty of eighty cents per book and one hundred thousand volumes are already ordered. Eighty thousand dollars for one year's work is pretty fair wages.

The Central Exporting and Guarantee Company has been organized at Cincinnati, with a capital of $100,000. Lewis Lebus was elected President, J. M. Kimbrough Secretary, and R. P. Stoll Treasurer.

SYMPATHY for the American laborer, tender solicitude for the workingman, which has slumbered now for close upon four years, begins at last to awaken. In the course of the next few months we shall find men perfectly frantic in their devotion to the laborer's interest and their desire for his vote. And this will last until after election, and then the labor question will not trouble the politicians for four more years again.

Rough Jake.

Arkansas Traveler.

"Is she any better?" he asked.

"No," whispered his father.

"Will she get well?"

"I don't know."

"May I kiss her?"

Mrs. Mulittle sobbed and took the boy into her arms. "You must not kiss her, darling. You might be ill as she is."

"Would kissin' her make me sick?"

"It might."

"Let me kiss her anyway?"

"No, Willie," replied the father.

"An' can't I ever kiss her again?"

"No; not in this world."

The physician came. The boy went out and sorrowfully sat on the front steps. Rough Jake, a boy that lived in the neighborhood, came along, holding in his motley hand a rose he had doubtless stolen. Rough Jake is a kind of social outcast. No mother will allow her children to associate with him, and feeling this ostracism, he was constantly seeking revenge by inflicting punishment on youngsters whom he "caught out."

"Hello, Billy," said Jake, stopping and kicking the step.

Young Mulittle did not reply.

"Why don't you talk, hah? Think youse'f above me, don't you? I've been havin' for you, young feller, an' I believe I'll give it to you right here."

"Go away, Jake, I don't want it."

"You're a coward. Come here, and be seized young Mulittle."

"Don't, Jake, I wouldn't fight of anybody was'er try an' kill me."

"What's the matter with you?"

"My little sister is about to die."

"Here, Billy," releasing his victim and handing him the rose. "I wouldn't hit you for all the money in the world. Don't cry, Billy, please don't," taking up the boy's hat and gently placing it on his head. "Good by, an' don't think that I want to hurt you."

Life is a beautiful and winding lane; on either side bright flowers and beautiful butterflies, and tempting fruits, which we sorely crave to admit and taste so eager are we to hasten to an opening which we imagine will be more beautiful still; in other words, we hasten through life too rapidly; never enjoy the good and beautiful of day, but seeking to reach something more beautiful further ahead; seeking, but never realizing, seems to be the fate of mankind.

Gone—one of earth's brightest flowers, cultivated and transported heavenward by the celestial beings who inhabit the cerulean dome above. Gone! The unutterable sorrow and anguish that is wrung out of the hearts of parents and friends at the simple word, but one which speaks volumes. It tells of the death of one, Miss Ruth Seepor, who by her loveliness and sublime kindness of nature had endeared every heart toward her. She was butting into the promiss of sweet womanhood when struck by the chilly blast of death. But as she has gone from midst the circle where she shone as the embodiment of sweet christian purity. She was a devoted follower of the cross, trying to follow the will of him who called her hence. Her disposition was such that she had a kind word for all, and a smile that betokened good will and peace to all. Though gone, she is not forgotten. A vision of her smiling face and kindly ways will cling to reason's throne until life's labor is done. Sleeping, sweetly sleeping, may the angels of mercy be the guardians of her tomb until the great day of reckoning; and then, with the hand grasped of love with the dear ones still lingering on earth, walk through the paths of eternity and an eternal life of bliss. Her virtues were many. Her life, so short, will stand forth not to be surpassed by the hand of time as one of purity peace and good will towards all. Her companions and acquaintances have mourned her as one who was near and dear, but console themselves that she is with him who doeth all things well.

FOREIGN TRADE.

Interesting Facts for Those Interested in the Subject.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—To those studying the export trade with a view of making it valuable to the manufacturing interests, the following from a communication recently received by the State Department will be of interest:

"It is almost vitally necessary to have a resident partner in each considerable foreign market abroad, and especially so in new centers where trade is in its infancy, in order that all the varying and delicate phases as to the needs and tastes of the natives may be wisely studied and provided for. This is fully understood in England and the representatives of English houses are early sent out to gain a practical knowledge of the special wants of every foreign market by residing among the people they are to supply with merchandise."

Cowboys Battling.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 12.—Reports from the Little River County say a pitched battle occurred about four o'clock yesterday, between two parties of cowboys, which met near Laynesport, and in the encounter John Vaughn was mortally and Dielard and Fretwell badly wounded. They composed one set, while Crockett, Gerland, Ashworth, Simpson and one whose name is unknown, constituted the other party. H. Ashworth was the only one of the latter party shot and that in the face. The fight was caused by a dispute about some cattle. The parties were all placed under arrest.

Political.

St. Louis, April 12.—A correspondent of the Globe-Democrat gives the following summary of the Presidential preferences of the delegates in this State to the Republican National Convention: Blaine, 11; Arthur, 9; Logan, 7; Edmunds, 5. None of the delegates are strongly pronounced in their opinions, however, and will doubtless be governed largely by the views of delegates from Republican States.
